

In a hidden and secluded VALLEY OF THE TOLMINKA RIVER lies the ALPINE PASTURE OF POLOG, where cattle graze amidst the fairy-tale mountains and the excellent Tolmin cheese is made. The pastureland lies in the southern part of TRIGLAV NATIONAL PARK, and is a starting point for numerous mountain hiking excursions or simply for a pleasant walk to the enchanting springs of the Tolminka, which rise a few kilometres higher up.

The valley has quite a colourful history. DURING THE FIRST WORLD WAR it was dotted with huts, workshops and storehouses, since – safe from artillery fire – it was the rear of the Austro-Hungarian forces. In the period BETWEEN THE WARS, along a ridge of the Bohinj-Tolmin mountains ran the border between the kingdoms of Italy and Yugoslavia. To defend this border, in the 1930s the Italian army built three large concrete bunkers in the area around today's Alpine pasture. DURING THE SECOND WORLD WAR, in August 1944, up above the valley, the pasture of Sleme and Mali Stador were the scene of a tragic battle between the Simon Gregorčič Partisan Brigade and the German army.

Above the entrance rises the bell tower with a sundial, the imperial crest and the inscription PAX (peace). The exterior is also adorned with THE CRESTS OF THE 18 PROVINCES THAT MADE UP AUSTRIA-HUNGARY, AND THE CRESTS OF RIJEKA AND TRIESTE. In the interior, scorched into oak panels symbolising the pages of a memorial book, in the system of the military hierarchy are the 2565 names of Austro-Hungarian soldiers who fell in surrounding battlefields and are buried at Loče pri Tolminu. The interior of the church is painted and decorated in the Secession style. Blue and black predominate, with gold and white ornamentation. On each side of the altar, with a mosaic depiction of the Holy Spirit as a symbol of peace, a large angel is painted. The wooden part of the tabernacle, with a carving of Christ on the Cross and two angels kneeling, is the work of the Brigade wood carver Anton Perathoner.

High above the stream of the Tolminka rises a WOODEN SHRINE – THE MEMORIAL CHURCH OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN JAVORCA, dedicated to fallen Austro-Hungarian defenders of the Tolmin battlefield on the Soča (Isonzo) Front (1915–1917). Over the entrance door the inscription reads: This monument was built during the war by members of the 3rd Mountain Brigade, a battle unit of the 15th Corps, in honour and memory of their comrades who fell here. Built in the period from 1 March to 1 November 1916. The building was designed by the Vienna artist Remigius Geyling (1878–1974), then a first lieutenant, while the organisation and management of the construction was headed by the Hungarian-born Lieutenant Géza Jablonszky. It was built by Austro-Hungarian soldiers who were skilled in various trades; the walls and lower section are of stone, while the upper part of the construction is of wood. The viewing terrace by the church reveals a vista of the magnificent Rdeči Rob (Red Margin), the enchanting chain of the Bohinj-Tolmin mountains, and also takes in the rolling gentleness of the surrounding hills.

Memorial Church of the Holy Spirit

THE 100-YEAR-OLD CHURCH, which is built mainly of wood, requires constant maintenance. Preserved from the period of the first renovation by Italian troops in 1934 is a panel with the Latin inscription Ultra cineres hostium ira non superest (Wrath does not reach through the ashes of the enemy). After the Second World War, up until the second renovation at the beginning of the 1980s the church became pitifully dilapidated. Following the Easter earthquake in 1998, which permanently marked the entire valley, the complete renovation ended in 2005. In 2016, the restorers refreshed the colours of the ceiling painting and in 2017 the bell tower was restored.
